Pope Changed Great Deal Since His Recent Illness

(Copyright 1938 by United Press)

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 21 (UPI) — The United Press learns that Pope Pius has changed a great deal since his recent illness. He has lost much weight, but feels well. He is less stern and formal.

The pontiff was critically ill for months. Due to vericose veins it was almost impossible for him to move his legs. When he began to recover, he went to the papal summer residence at Castel Gavio for a period of recuperation and only recently returned to the Vatican.

He lost much weight during his illness. His clothes fit loosely.

There is less of the stern formality about his relations with his colleagues. Frequently he remarks to close friends that he feels even better than before his illness.

Eden Bowen who represented the general authorities of the church at the two general sessions, Sunday and the priesthood session, Saturday night, declared in developing the theme of his address, that it was far more important to him that the members of the church are sure of their foundations, than to bask in praise uttered by non-members of the church in current national publications.

UTAH STAKE CONFERENCE CONCLUDED

Bowen Urges Adherence To L. D. S. Ideals At All Times

Steadfast adherence to Latter-day Saint ideals no matter whether it brings praise or criticism from the world was the counsel of the members of the church by Elder Albert E. Bowen of the Council of Twelve Apostles, speaking at the Sunday afternoon session of the Utah stake quarterly conference.

Eden Bowen who represented the general authorities of the church at the two general sessions, Sunday and the priesthood session, Saturday night, declared in developing the theme of his address, that it was far more important to him that the members of the church are sure of their foundations, than to bask in praise uttered by non-members of the church in current national publications.

New Stake Clerk

Ole E. Olsen Jr., formerly an alternate member of the high council, was sustained as stake clerk by the conference, when his name was submitted by President T. N. Taylor to take the place of the late E. H. Holt who filled the position for nearly 40 years.

President Taylor paid a glowing tribute to the faithful labors of Mr. Holt in the stake clerk position. He expressed the irreparable loss sustained by the Utah stake in his passing. He recalled his faithfulness, his willingness to serve, and devotion to duty and told of the great love and esteem in which he had been held by the members of the stake presidency, the high council and the rank and file.

President W. Monroe Paxman, second counselor in the stake presidency, in a brief address urged closer cooperation among the members of the church to help those less fortunate, become self-sustaining. In the church welfare program. He said one of the
